PAK NEAR CIVIL WAR

East declares independence

NEW DELHI, Friday.—A civil war situation developed in Pakistan today as President Yahya Khan outlawed the Awami League of East Pakistan, as its leader Sheikh Mujibur Rahman proclaimed independence for the province under the name of "Bangla Desh."

Indian radio monitors reported Sheikh Mujibur made the independence proclamation from a radio station believed captured by his supporters from army authorities, calling itself the "Free Bengal Radio Station."

The black history of Bangladesh

Genocide, 1971 mass killing of the people in East Pakistan by the then Pakistan occupation army and their collaborators during the war of liberation in 1971. No definite survey has yet been made to ascertain the exact number of people killed by the Pakistan army.

Immediately after the War of Liberation, it was estimated to be as high as three million. The genocide committed by the Pakistan army is one of the worst holocausts in world history.

Article of Genocide

- Killing members of the group
- Causing serious bodily or mental harm to members of the group
- Deliberately inflicting on the group conditions of life calculated to bring about its physical destruction in whole or in part
- Imposing measures intended to prevent births within the group
- Forcibly transferring children of the group to another group

Operation Searchlight

The Black Chapter of Bangladesh History

Operation Searchlight

Operation search light was a well-planned military operation carried out by the Pakistan Army to curb the Bengali Nationalist movement in East Pakistan on 25 March in 1971. The operation began at 11 pm. The purpose of this operation was to arrest or kill the distinguished Awami League leaders, student leaders and Bengali intellectuals in the main cities of East Pakistan including Dhaka. Military operations were being taken under “Operation Search Light” on and from 11 pm of 25 March to middle of May in all the big towns of the province.

The Pakistani army sought out those especially likely to join the resistance – young boys. In the next morning, bodies of young men, student and teachers were found in fields, floating down rivers or near army camps. Sadly, in spite of the overwhelming evidence, footage of the killings, the mass graves, innumerable eyewitness accounts and factual coverage by foreign journalists during 1971, the Bangladeshi genocide has still not been recognized as such by the United Nations.

That was simply the start. Death squads rampaged through Dhaka's streets, murdering perhaps 7,000 people in a single night.
Half of Dhaka's population fled within a week, and 30,000 people were slaughtered.

International media outlets and English-language reference books have reported fatality counts ranging from 5,000 - 35,000 in Dhaka and 1,500,000 - 3,000,000 in whole Bangladesh from March to December 1971.29
These systematic executions enraged the Bengalis. Many quickly took up arms and joined the liberation war.

Genocide in Bangladesh in World Media

Initially, the world could hardly know the extent of genocide due to very strong press censorship. However, from July 1971 foreign electronic and print media started reporting various aspects and ramifications of the genocide. The United Nations also expressed their deep concern about the holocaust.
